

ABSTRACT

[0038] A method and apparatus to employ a memory module information file is described. In one embodiment, information related to identifying characteristics of a memory module of a system, stored on a non-volatile unit of memory (e.g., an SPD), is used to access a separate file providing additional information about the memory module. The information accessed from the separate file is then used to further optimize a performance threshold of the memory module.